JOLLY TARS MAKE MERRY

Men Of Cruiser Bedford Will Entertain Friends Tomorrow Night

Minstrelsy will hold forth at Oceanic wharf tomorrow evening. The entertainment is to be given by the men of H. M. S. Bedford. The matter of an entertainment has been mooted by the jolly tars ever since their arrival at the port. The boys have been treated royally during their stay at Honolulu and to show their appreciation of the many pleasures lavished upon them they have prepared a program of song and recitations that is declared will eclipse anything of the sort given in a long time.

Several minstrel kings of the Bedford will have a prominent part in the first portion of the entertainment. Lieutenant John Ton has been selected as interlocutor. There is a hilarious array of end men including Messrs. Williams, Watson, Hobbs and Scott. They are armed with a tropical bunch of jokes and gags.

In the second part songs and recitations will reign supreme. Master of Arms Keating, who is a balladist of note on board the vessel, will sing a number of Harry Lauder's Scottish ballads.

The show will be given under the auspices of the Theatrical Party of the Bedford. This organization is the life of the ship while at sea. They serve to while away many an otherwise lonely or uneventful hour.

A large number of invitations have been issued for the affair. The program commences promptly at 8 o'clock.

FOOHINGSUEYSNAKES HAWAII CENTIPEDES

WONDERFUL YARN ABOUT THINGS FROM KAHULUI.

Waterfront Reporters of New York Have Lots of Fun Telling Stories of What They Brought From Hawaii.

Some of the dreams on Hawaii last night came out of New York are wonderful, and this from the New York Evening Telegram is not the least: There was plenty doing aboard the British bark Foonh Suey, in port from the island of Kahoolawe, of the Hawaii group, during the eleven weeks that it took to make the journey around the Horn to New York. When the big vessel reached the sugar docks at Greenpoint two snakes and two centipedes were unshipped, and all hands, from Captain Willett down, breathed easier than they had since April 25 last, twenty-four hours out of the port of Kahului.

Hawaiian centipedes are known as the most dangerous and aggressive of their species, and it was, therefore, with the greatest care that everybody concerned in the loading process in the harbor in the Pacific handled the stuff that came aboard and kept watch for undesirable stowaways. Karl Pretz and Jimmie O'Brien, boatswain and quartermaster respectively, kept guard on the gangways and watched the packages and cases go aboard, and scrutinized every bit of matting and bamboo that came from the wharf to the sailing ship.

The Foonh Suey weighed anchor and set sail eastward across the Pacific on the night of April 24. All hands then joined in a musicale, in which Pretz and O'Brien took part as end men, and in which Johnnie Custer and Frederick Mahler played the guitar and mandolin respectively.

Captain Willett after the show handed a liberal noggin around and once more all hands prepared to tumble in the hammocks.

On the way forward Freddie Mahler stumbled over something near the entry to the galley and he and his mandolin went flying across the deck in the direction of the starboard rail. When Mahler picked himself up he discovered a nine-foot black snake coiled up on deck. His cries brought his shipmates to the spot, but when they arrived there was no snake and Mahler was chided for his apparent susceptibility to a single dream.

Disconcerted and angry at his fellows, Mahler went to the fore-cabin. He was about to step into his bunk when Pretz, occupying the bunk above his, gave a yell and tumbled out to the floor.

"An octopus!" shouted Pretz. "A devil fish! A crab with hair on it!"

The half dozen men in the crew's quarters at the time rushed to Pretz's bunk, but found no trace of anything worse than an ordinary ship's cockroach. Quiet was soon restored and Mahler and Pretz were put down by the rest of the sailors as likely candidates for the total abstinence league.

The next evening Johnnie Custer was spinning a sea yarn when he puts his hand in his pocket to find some tobacco and emitted a shout. He leaped to his feet and was doing his best to tear off the lower part of his garments, the meantime dancing a Salome accompaniment to his continued shouts.

No one of those sitting about him dared to go to his rescue, and finally, when the trousers had come off and lay in a heap on the deck, one of the crew stirred them up with a bit of stick, and dislodged a snake about four feet long from the pocket into which Custer had thrust his hand.

For three weeks none on the Foonh Suey took a comfortable snooze, day or night. On the afternoon of May 29 Mahler discovered his first and original snake asleep on some matting under the half-opened hatchway over the forward hold. Without disturbing the snake he called to others and many gazed upon the large and deadly looking serpent that was estimated at about ten feet in length. When an effort was made to catch it, it got away and was not finally caught until July 4, when another of the crew caught it with a crocheted stick and placed it in a box. Pretz caught his own pet monster on May 21. It proved to be a centipede about a foot long. It had 1,972 feet. On May 30 Frank Farrelly caught a second centipede, and both insects were placed in a box and saved for the Bronx Zoological Gardens. The Foonh Suey was searched as no vessel was ever searched before, but nothing beyond the two snakes and two centipedes were discovered aboard. All four were sent to Director Hornaday when the Foonh Suey tied up at the sugar docks.

WOOLLEY TOOK A MODEL BILL

Journey To United States in Interest Of Prohibition

John G. Woolley has gone to Washington on a mission of prohibition, according to the explanations that have been made by his friends in connection with his rather quiet departure on the Korea. The last time that the ex-presidential candidate on the Prohibition ticket arrived in Honolulu he announced that he "had come to stay." Previous to his coming he was quoted in an eastern weekly as stating that he believed that the Prohibition party had accomplished its object and was no longer needed.

His departure on the Korea was unostentatious and it is now stated that included in Woolley's baggage is a draft of an ideal, bottle-plate, prohibition bill for the benefit of the Territory of Hawaii to be urged upon the authorities at Washington by Woolley. There are faint intimations that he received encouragement in the mission from some members of the last Congressional party.

NO AGREEMENT

the streets in the manner they indicate. They cannot grant a franchise so why should they burden ours with this requirement?

"It might be different if strangers came into this community, incorporated at a million dollars and made these demands. Such treatment would be justified, but here are firms like Hackfeld, Brewer & Co., Alexander & Baldwin, and others who have given liberally to everything. They have done everything possible for the Territory, and never refuse to contribute where it will do good. I cannot see the justice of it.

"As far as the inspection is concerned, we would be obliged to send a man around after their inspector had opened up our manholes or otherwise inspected our system, to see if he put it back in proper shape again. Do we get anything out of that? No, we are asked to spend money here, and then held up because of the fact that the County Attorney gives an opinion that the Board controls the streets and can exact a fee from us for this work."

It is expected that Deputy County Attorney Milverton will give the Board his opinion some time today, and the Supervisors will then notify the Mutual people what conclusion they reach.

M'BRYDE AND OLAA AGAIN TO FRONT

Active Bidding For Both Stocks At Higher Prices.

Olaa and McBryde still hold the boards in the stock market and the price is advancing steadily on favorable reports and a general recognition that these so-called cheaper stocks are good buys.

Soon after the Exchange meeting this forenoon the brokers were out looking for McBryde at 4 1/2 with very little coming out, and the demand for Olaa was as active as ever.

Various reasons are given for this activity but the real cause is the fact, frequently pointed out by this paper, that considering the general condition of the market and of the properties themselves, the quotations for the cheaper stocks have ruled altogether too low.

Nineteen thousand dollars of Hilo Railway were reported today. Oahu Sugar sold at 32 1/2. This is a shade off the recent quotations but the stock is not weak. Waiwaka sold at 118.50 and is strengthening again. Pioneer again sold at 185. The market is strong and money is comparatively easy.

CRICKET TODAY

There is a fine crowd out at the cricket match, which began at noon today. The weather is perfect for the game and a cool breeze is blowing across the field. Quite a number of the sailors from the Bedford are out watching their officers at work on the cricket field.

The G. O. M. of local cricket is taking part in the game, and a number of the wives and daughters of the club members are dispensing refreshments. Captain Fitzherbert of the Naval eleven is handling his men in fine form and at the present stage the game looks a very open one.

Bob Andrews is skipper of the local eleven and the men behind him are showing good form. The details of the play up to the time of going to press are as follows:

The men from the Bedford went in first and lost four wickets for 147 runs.

At 2:30 o'clock the Bedford eleven had lost four wickets for 189 runs; of this big total Lieut. Pelly had made 89 not out. When the big batsman had made 70 he was badly missed by Deerr, who got the ball into his hands, and after juggling with it for a few seconds dropped the sphere. This was an expensive error and Pelly after that life, hit up all over the field.

Tewby, who was caught by Maclean off Morse, made 29 in good form and showed some pretty strokes. Mayhew made 14 before he was clean bowled by Hatfield with a ball that came in a lot from the off.

Captain Fitzherbert was caught by Anderson, off Hatfield, after he had compiled 16 in taking fashion. St. Lucas fell to Hatfield, who shattered his wicket with a beauty that completely deceived the batsman.

The Bedford eleven intend closing their inning when the 200 runs are reached. That will set the local men a mark that they will have great difficulty in attaining. The game at time of writing is all in favor of the Bedford eleven.
